Dear ... and Michael Woodcock,

I am writing to offer my sincere congratulations on your successful participation and presentation at the recent Georgia Southern Student Scholars' Symposium (GS4).

I want to acknowledge and celebrate your significant accomplishment. Completing a research project and then sharing your findings in a public forum like the GS4 is a tremendous undertaking that requires dedication, intellectual curiosity, and rigorous work. Your poster presentation, "Thinking Under Pressure: Does Mindset and Mood affect Cognitive Performance?," reflects your prowess in taking your intellectual inquiry through next steps into the research process to final presentation to your peers.

This is a milestone achievement that reflects your commitment to academic excellence. We are incredibly proud of your contribution to the scholarly life of our university. I hope this experience motivates you to continue pursuing research and intellectual inquiry in your future academic and professional endeavors. Best wishes for continued success in your studies.

Please note, if you would like a physical copy of this letter, please send an email with the delivery address to: bblackwell@georgiasouthern.edu and we will get it to you as quickly as possible.

Sincerely,
